who is in charge of Russia's latest aerial effort. It was Levantseff who rescued a flight over the North Pole route in August, 1933, but was forced to return to Moscow because of a broken oil feed line when he was well out over the Arctic ocean. Three years earlier he and other Russians had flown around the world for use in rescuing 161 persons who had been marooned on an ice floe off Cape Karen on northern Siberia.

Russian Once Rescued Ace Yankee Flier

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 14.—Jimmy Malters — American flier once rescued from the Arctic tundra by Sigismund Levanevsky — believed the Russian ace will complete successfully his flight from Moscow across the North Pole to the United States.

Despite the long silence of the Russian plane, hours overdue at Fairbanks, Alaska, Mat-

"I consider Levaneffsky the best Arctic flier the soviet has. I am sure he will do a creditable job in his present flight."

Four Workmen Electrocuted By High Volt Wires

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 14. — Four workmen were electrocuted today at suburban Marinton when drill-drilling equipment they were trying came in contact with high-voltage lines of the New Brun-

Electrical Power Commission.
Hiram Perry of nearby Acamayo McCullum of Saint John, and Ed Kennedy of Beaver Harbor, B., died instantly as contact with a high voltage sent the current through their bodies.
George Perry, burned terribly when he attempted to rescue his father, died shortly afterwards.

RUSS FLIERS VANISHED IN ARCTIC STORM

all pipe had stalled one of the motors.

PLANE MUCH LIGHTER

"Flying 4,000 meters (13,000 feet) through continuous clouds," he said, "I used several tons fuel. Plane is as much lighter as we are able to estimate the flight with three motors without descending."

In the last message received at 7:50 a.m. M.S.T. Friday the message merely was:

"How do you hear me? Wait."

Two hours earlier the Yakutsk station heard the plane report "everything in order." The flares, according to the station, were in use.

Officials trying to regain contact with the plane were unsuccessful with Fairbanks, Alaska, San Francisco and Washington.

The transport started with engine trouble at Fairbanks but the flares planned to land at Alaska to get help.

Little rescue equipment was aboard although the airmen had a rubber boat, tent, food, clothing, fuel, supplies and enough energy for 30 days to fight to higher altitudes.

HAD FOREIGN DIFFICULTIES

Both Levensky and navigator Levensky had foreign difficulties at the time of the flight.

The newspaper "For Industrial Aviation," Levensky had described as a "big spot on the map" of 1,315 miles from the pole to Alaska.

He had said that the flight was "extremely unfavorable." It might be said that the plane had crashed in the Arctic Circle.

Once they reached the Alaska coast, the flares planned to fly back to the Yukon and the Arctic Circle.

MOST UNPLEASANT

"The part of the flight," the article read, "will be most unpleasant because of the plane's weight. It will be diminishing, cutting down chances to find a suitable landing."

Levensky, writing in the magazine "Idea," had said that he was one of the plane's four crew members. He said it was possible that we would be forced to jump from the plane during a violent storm of the flight. During a violent storm of the flight, he said, he would only be able to jump from the plane for a short time.

Big Crowd Waits At Local Airport

A large crowd of people gathered at the Edmonton airport this Friday night, waiting for the plane to arrive.

The plane was expected to arrive at about 10 p.m. and the crowd was estimated to be one of the largest ever seen at the airport.

Through airport officials turned off the powerful search lights after midnight, the crowd was estimated to be one of the largest ever seen at the airport.

It was reported that the plane would not land until after midnight.

Prairie Country Was Wanted by East, Hastily Settled For Its Enrichment, Says Manitoba Editor at Political Convention

LAKE LOUCHBURGH, Ont., Aug. 14.—Upon the people of Eastern and Central Canada rests a moral obligation for the fate of Western settlers on a land hastily and extravagantly settled, said George V. Ferguson, managing editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, in a speech here yesterday at the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics. "Eastern Canada wanted the prairies all the time," declared Mr. Ferguson, "and now that the burden of the west may seem to rest on Eastern and Central Canada, they cannot avoid the responsibility for its situation."

Eastern Canada, he said, had been the beneficiary of the policy of the federal government for the purpose of extending imperial policy to the Pacific coast and "Western Canada," he said, had been the beneficiary of the policy of the federal government for the purpose of extending imperial policy to the Pacific coast.

With the realization of the possible wealth, easterners agreed, and, although westerners agreed, wealth, the line, he said, went to the east through high interest rates on pioneer money, and by costly transportation charges for wheat on lengthy hauls.

"The reason given for the high interest rates on pioneer money," he said, "was the need for money for power expansion, which was the need for money for power expansion, which was the need for money for power expansion."

With regard to the present situation, he said, it was possible to speak of the prairies as an economic unit, and, although it was possible to speak of the prairies as an economic unit, it was possible to speak of the prairies as an economic unit.

DEATH DEALT FROM AIR BY PLANE ATTACK

American Missionary and Other Prominent Foreigners Are Killed

Japanese planes took to the air to fight them. The Haves correspondent reported one Japanese plane, catapulted from the deck of the Japanese flagship Idzumi, shot down a Chinese bomber.

The Chinese bombers flew in groups of three and four, considered damage was inflicted in water, from areas.

Haves News Agency reported the Japanese tanks of the Asiatic Petroleum Company, Far Eastern subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell, caught fire, sending vast areas of flame and smoke into the sky in a district, to the east of Shanghai, proper.

The Haves correspondent was unable to learn whether the fire was limited only to the vicinity of the petroleum tanks or in the vicinity of the Japanese fleet.

C. J. Hind, a British subject employed by the Japanese telegraph company, was wounded when Japanese planes bombed the area. A warehouse belonging to the Japanese telegraph company was destroyed.

merchant ships were cleared out of the harbor, leaving only the Japanese fleet and Japanese warships standing by.

The Haves correspondent watched 100 Japanese planes in the Hong Kong riverfront. Landing up in front of the Japanese telegraph office, they bombed their flag, lowered flags in prayer, and marched off to the Japanese fleet.

STANDBY PACT IS EFFECTIVE NOVEMBER 1st

the company needed a standby for their service just as much as the city. He would not have any agreement other than one which would insure payment from the company. If the city power plant was called on to supply power.

ALD CRANG OPPOSED

Alderman Crang was opposed to having any truck or trade with the Calgary Power Co. She was of the opinion that the company, if given a standby agreement, would seek to increase the absorption of the city owned plant. Other aldermen agreed to the agreement.

When the agreement was made, both parties should pay for power consumed without any standby fee being paid.

Mayor J. A. Clarke expressed the opinion that a standby agreement was necessary while the power plant was being extended, but that the power company should not carry the load, but to satisfy large power owners that sufficient reserve was available for continued operations in the event of an unforeseen plant breakdown.

The city commissioners were instructed to proceed with necessary details to establish the standby scheme at the earliest possible moment, and also to explore the possibilities of using part of the money available for road repair work and the completion of the stadium.

It was also decided that a committee of five was appointed to act in an advisory capacity to the city council in connection with the housing scheme.

AWARD CONTRACT

Contract for construction of gravel runway at the airport was awarded to the Fraser Construction Co., the tender from this company being $14,260, lowest of eight tenders.

It was made a stipulation that the contractor would employ 50 per cent relief labor on the work. This was opposed by Alderman Walter Davies, who termed the motion by Alderman Davies as "non-sensical."

Alderman Patterson also opposed the motion.

It was also made a term of the contract that all persons employed on the work, except key men, be obtained through the city labor service.

Consent agreed to the sale of the Colwell block to J. R. Huntbach for $5,000, this being with $200 of the list price of the property. Taxes will be assumed by the purchaser as from date of sale.

There were no passengers on the plane. Pilot Waagen flying solo, was in the air, Waagen resided at 1215 11th avenue.

Cartoon Film Factory Is An Animated Scene As Artisans Frame 'Sketchy' Fantasy Idols

Pen and Ink Epics of Comedy Are Turned Out Methodically, Without Interruption From Noisy Directors, Complaining Players

By PAUL HARRISON

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14.—An animated cartoon factory is a much quieter place, and more efficient, than an ordinary movie studio. Without bellowing assistant directors and bleating players, life is pleasant, if more purposeful.

It didn't take long for the animators to introduce machine-like efficiency into their realm of pure fantasy. I used to think that such films were turned out painstakingly, picture by picture, by a lot of busy little gnomes turned Disney, sitting cross-legged at a little something.

Instead of that, the pen-and-ink and water-color epics represent just about the highest development of the unit system of production in Hollywood.

There are budgets and shooting schedules and production charts. There are producers and directors and art directors and story producers. From morning to evening, each picture has its own full staff of executives and technicians.

STUDIO "GROW UP"

The firm which makes the most animated pictures is Leon Schlesinger, a veteran glassman who has been in practically all branches of the stage and movie business, but who excels at drawing a straight line. In 1929, when he had a prosperous little studio turning out titles and trailer ads and such junk, Warner suggested making cartoon films.

So Schlesinger started "Merrie Melodies" with a staff of 25 people. Now he has two studios, a staff of 175 workers and a payroll of nearly a third of a million dollars a year.

This year he will make 10 Merrie Melodies in color and 10 Looney Tunes in black and white. That's twice the number of cartoon shorts usually made by Disney.

Schlesinger is a pleasant, middle-aged man who reminds you a little of Hal Roach. He likes his work and gets a kick out of his own pictures, although with a modesty that is peculiarly non-Hollywood. He says he's just a businessman, and sometimes, especially during the war, he gets busy and gives Porky cartoon tales and changed him a little in developing his character. And now he stars in pictures a just, the Looney Tunes.

A stuttering character actor does the story during for recording; then the record is speeded up so that the voice is about an octave higher when it reaches the film. Before they attained acting prominence, Rucellie Hudson and Jane Winters worked for Schlesinger, dubbing in their voices for the cartoon characters.

THE REAL ACTOR
Hollywood has scores of people capable of imitating voices, and the producer never has any trouble finding talent for impersonating in sound, the voice of a regular movie star.

"Well, the minute we saw that pig we knew we had something. It was just like spotting a promising personality among the extras on his playing in a regular movie."

"We got busy and gave Porky cartoon tales and changed him a little in developing his character. And now he stars in pictures a just, the Looney Tunes."

PRINCESS
The first story of a beautiful Princess maiden and a dashing Virginian cavalier, laid against one of the most amazing periods in American history, brought Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray to the Princess Theatre Monday in "Maid of Salem," a farish and beautiful production, produced and directed by Frank Lloyd.

The famous witchcraft hysteria of 1692, which began in Salem and spread to the other colonies, forms the background of "Maid of Salem." MacMurray, as the husband of the stern townfolk by her sister. She meets and falls in love with MacMurray. A fugitive cavalier from Virginia, who is hiding in the home of his uncle, Clarendon, to both, she is seen with him. Shortly after he returns to Virginia, witchcraft hysteria sweeps the colony. Miss Colbert is caught in the mad run and condemned to die on the testimony of hysterical women and prejudiced youngsters. She is saved only by the timely arrival of MacMurray, who proves that he is not the devil at all but a very handsome young man. His appearance in the Salem townfolk the population to their ruin.

DREAMLAND
The most striking human drama the screen has ever offered is now at the Dreamland Theatre Monday when "You Live Only Once" is shown. Produced by Warner Bros. and directed by William Wyler, the picture is a masterpiece of the dramatic art.

The picture is a masterpiece of the dramatic art. It tells the story of a man who is condemned to die for a crime he did not commit. The picture is a masterpiece of the dramatic art. It tells the story of a man who is condemned to die for a crime he did not commit.

One of the cameramen in a cartoon comedy studio is shown on location, right in the studio, where he turns out work on a regular shooting schedule, just like any other Hollywood cameraman.

Jane Winters worked for Schlesinger, dubbing in their voices for the cartoon characters.

On these charts the action of each scene is minutely described, and a certain number of "frames" or individual pictures, is allotted for each scene.

Also on the animators' chart is written the dialogue, divided into syllables and marked with letters for a certain group of pictures so that the characters' lip movements will synchronize perfectly, as though they are actually speaking.

In fact, the animators actually try to reproduce the lip movements of the actors in the picture, looking into mirrors in the studio, and then they are formed.

RIALTO

Cary Grant, the "tall dark and handsome" original of Mae West's fancy, and the vivacious dark-eyed Mary Brian, make an ideal team in the new Warner Bros. production, "Romance and Riches," which opens at the Rialto Theatre today.

The picture is based on the well-known novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim, "The Amazing Story of Mr. Ernest Bliss," and sets forth the experiences of a young millionaire, who is told by his doctor that he must live for a year only in order to save his life.

Then he turns his apartment over to his butler and his affairs to his lawyer, takes a small room in the poorest section of London and sets out to get a job. He is in turn a gas-station attendant, a grocery salesman and a chauffeur. He falls in love with the secretary of his first employer and after many adventures, learns that there are some things in life money can't buy.

"Romance and Riches" is a fast-moving, romantic comedy melodrama which will give the audience a picture of the life of a young millionaire, who is told by his doctor that he must live for a year only in order to save his life.

A stirring reaction of the adventurous "slave trade," "Slave Ship" was directed by Tay Garnett. George Sanders, Jane Darwell and Joseph Schildkraut are among those featured in the film.

CAPITOL

Proving again the versatility of the new film at the Capitol Theatre today, Monday and Tuesday, "The Emperor's Candlesticks," presents a picture of a young millionaire, who is told by his doctor that he must live for a year only in order to save his life.

Then he turns his apartment over to his butler and his affairs to his lawyer, takes a small room in the poorest section of London and sets out to get a job. He is in turn a gas-station attendant, a grocery salesman and a chauffeur. EDMONTON'S 29th ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW OPENS TUESDAY

Highlights and Low Downs

By ERNEST COWPER

Houday Police!
Scanning the provincial press over, it would appear that the faithful day yesterday would be indeed be that for somebody at Wetaskiwin where the proprietor of one of the hotels served public notice that Thursday would be the deadline for avoiding prosecution of the "party who stole a table, covered flower vase, bath towel, hand towels and carpet in ladies' washroom."

DAILY HOUR "As a matter of fact" says the magazine, "all film stars would rather be at home with their pets and gardens and books than out on a hitless party."

It has been settled beyond any doubt that the PREMIER OF THE PROVINCE OF ALBERTA, JAMES H. MACKENZIE, will be in Edmonton on Tuesday, August 16, 1937, for the opening of the 29th Annual Flower Show.

And you are an old timer if you remember when the first August of the year from Michael Palko's Montana herd reached Edmonton and the cattle were being driven back out at that time.

Asked for comment on the wire of R. H. Mackenzie, Premier of Alberta, asking delay in enforcing the recently passed bank licensing legislation, until a reference could be made to the Supreme Court, Premier Aberhart declared that he had no comment to make at present.
